THE DE LA GUERRA COLLECTION*CALENDAR OF DOCUMENTS*IN THE SANTA BÁRBARA MISSION ARCHIVE-LIBRARY

By MAYNARD J. GEIGER., O.F.M., PH.D.

(This typescript-index of the 75,000 pages of documentation, updated and revised from the published edition of 1947, enumerates, describes and otherwise comments on the valuable collection of historical materials housed at Santa Bárbara Mission Archive-Library.)

This collection belonged to José Antonio de la Guerra y Noriega (1779-1858), famed captain of the Spanish army and commandant of the Santa Barbara Presidio (1806-1842) and to his successors. He was also treasurer for the Franciscan missionaries of California, which accounts for the many letters of the missionaries in this series that were sent to him. These documents remained in the hands of the de la Guerra family until 1967, when Father Joseph Thompson, O.F.M., great-grandson of Captain de la Guerra, died. A few years prior to his death, Father Thompson had deposited the collection at the Henry E. Huntington Library, San Marino, California, with the proviso that upon his death, they be transferred to the Santa Barbara Mission Archive-Library and remain there permanently as a significant contribution to the story of Spanish, Mexican and early American Californiana.

The de la Guerra Collection

HISTORY OF THE SANTA BÁRBARA DE LA GUERRA FAMILY DOCUMENTS

by MAYNARD F. GEIGER, O.F.M.

[Reprinted from 'Southern California Quarterly,' Fall, 1972, Vol. LIV, No. 3]

On October 24, 1792, a young lad of thirteen years embarked at Cádiz, Spain, for America. He would spend the rest of his life, until his demise, February 11, 1858, along the shores of the Pacific. Born in the mountains of northern Spain, at Novales, in the province of Santander, March 6, 1779, he received the names José Antonio Julián. His father was a de la Guerra, his mother a Noriega. Their genealogy can be traced back to the early fourteenth century. <sup>1</sup> José was of the sangre azul of Christian Spain and there was warrior blood in his veins. The family name, de la Guerra, proclaimed the fact, and the coat-of-arms reflected it.

At the age of nineteen he became a soldier in Mexico and served there and in California, rising from cadet to captain. Coming to California in 1801, he lived through the Spanish, Mexican and early American periods. At Santa Barbara, in 1804, he married Antonia María Juliana Carrillo, daughter of Raymundo Carrillo and Tomása Lugo, thus joining two of California's most prominent families. Thirteen children were born to this couple, nine surviving him in death. <sup>2</sup> His son, Pablo, became the most prominent and it was he who, with his father, is chiefly responsible for the preservation of the de la Guerra documents.

José Antonio Julián de la Guerra came to Santa Barbara in 1815 as commander of California's fourth and last presidio, founded on April 21, 1782. <sup>3</sup> With the exception of two visits to Mexico on official military and political affairs, de la Guerra remained at Santa Barbara in his military capacity and later retirement until his death. It was in 1815 that de la Guerra brought with him the documents he had gathered in his earlier years. This nucleus was continually augmented until 1858. At first they were housed in the comandancia, part of the presidio. Subsequently, they were transferred to the house he built on present De La Guerra Street into which he moved on January 1, 1828. <sup>4</sup> There these documents remained until 1934. José's papers were later complimented by those of his son Pablo and by other members of the family.

When H. H. Bancroft and one of his assistants, Edward F. Murray, visited Santa Barbara in 1874, the great collector and historian had Murray transcribe the mission documents held by Mission Santa Bárbara, which form twelve large volumes in the Bancroft Library at the University of California, Berkeley. In his work Murray was aided by Francis Alphaeus Thompson, <sup>5</sup> son of Alphaeus B. Thompson, and father of the Reverend Joseph Thompson, O.F.M., of whom more will be said later. <sup>6</sup>

While Murray was engaged in his mission transcriptions, he paid a visit to the de la Guerra home in September, 1876, to ascertain if the family had a collection of historical material. He was shown the papers, but there was a disinclination to allow them to be taken to San Francisco for copying. Murray wrote to Henry L. Oak, Bancroft's librarian, January 25, 1877, saying: "It is even doubtful if I can get permission to take them to my room for convenience in copying. They are kept in an old dusty and dimly lighted attic, or alto, and there I expect I shall be obliged to do my work."<sup>7</sup> Murray added that the old Hispanic families distrusted the Yankees and could not consider them to have any other view than that of pecuniary gain.

Nothing was accomplished on that visit, but Murray was back in Santa Barbara again in August, 1877. By October he had obtained permission to have access to the family papers through Thomas D. Dibblee, who had married into the de la Guerra family and who was executor of José de la Guerra's will. <sup>8</sup> These transcripts in seven volumes may be found today in the Bancroft Library under the title: "Documentos del Señor Capitán Comandante de Santa Barbara Don José de la Guerra y Noriega durante las Dominaciones Española y Mexicana. "

In 1934 Father Joseph Thompson, O.F.M., great grandson of José de la Guerra, went to Santa Barbara to see his cousin, Delfina de la Guerra, daughter of Pablo, who was living in the ancestral house. He was aware that Delfina had some family papers but was not acquainted with their content or extent. When Father Thompson entered the room, he found Delfina seated at a table and at her side he noticed a large, old-fashioned straw laundry basket filled to its rim with papers seemingly thrown in topsy-turvy.

He asked her specifically if she had the will of José, her grandfather. In answer to his question she pointed to the basket and said: "It's there some place." To his utter amazement she continued: "These are my grandfather's papers. I do not know what to do with them. They are on my hands. Have you any suggestions?"<sup>9</sup> This discovery was like sighting some unknown land. Astounded, Father Thompson assured his cousin that he would be glad to assume the responsibility for them and stated that eventually they would find their way into the Santa Bárbara Mission Archive-Library to be safeguarded since her grandfather had been the treasurer of the mission padres, their friend, adviser and defender. For his faithful service his mortal remains had been buried in the crypt beneath the sanctuary of the old mission. Father Thompson later recalled that when he had finished, "her eyes filled with tears, she exclaimed 'Gracias a Dios.' " Delfina then informed him that there was also a large box containing the rest of the papers in the Dibblee home in care of her two nieces and that he could go there and claim them, which he subsequently did.

After being informed that the documents had been placed in the mission safe, Delfina wrote to her cousin: "I thank you for the great interest you have taken in the work you are doing with the documents I had so religiously tried to keep and often wondered whom I could trust with them to make use of and make known what our dear grandfather had done for California and I feel that you were a Godsend to us as well as to the de la Guerra family."<sup>10</sup>

When Father Thompson received this priceless collection, he said to Delfina: "Cousin Delfina, how can I ever adequately thank you for this rich gift? Have you any request of me?" She replied: "Yes, cousin, I have a request of you. I want my body to be placed near my grandparents, Don José and Doña María Antonia and my father, Don Pablo"<sup>11</sup> This request was granted when Father Thompson performed the funeral rites for Delfina in April 1953.<sup>12</sup> She had lived in the de la Guerra house for seventy years, and, true to her wish, she was laid next to Father Thompson's mother in the vaults of the mission cemetery.<sup>13</sup>

Father Thompson had various assignments as a Franciscan priest since his ordination in 1912, principally in California and Arizona. From 1932 until his death on May 16, 1967, he was stationed at St. Joseph's Friary, Los Angeles, as chaplain of the Los Angeles County Jails and Honor Farms. In his spare time he worked on the de la Guerra documents intensely, visited other California archives and made a trip to Mexico.<sup>14</sup> This he did in preparation for the biography of his great-grandfather which appeared in 1961 under the title El Gran Capitán: José de la Guerra. With proper permission, the de la Guerra Collection had been transferred from the safe at Mission Santa Bárbara to a safe in St. Joseph's Friary to facilitate his use of the material.

A few years before his death, Father Thompson placed the collection in the Henry E. Huntington Library, San Marino, on consignment, having drawn up a document which stated that in the event of his death, the collection was to be handed over to the archivist of Mission Santa Bárbara upon his request. Meanwhile the task was given to Miss Haydée Noya, expert Spanish linguist and skilled librarian, to classify and organize the various documents (about 2,000 in number and containing about 12,000 pages). This called for meticulous labor and consuming dedication. Her finished work was admirable.<sup>15</sup> The documents were arranged in alphabetical order, the communications of each author to the respective recipients being placed in a separate folder (or several if the letters were numerous). The folders were numbered from 1 to 1168 with the names of the author and the recipient noted. Also included were pertinent cross references. The folders filled four drawers of letter-size files and nine library boxes of legal size documents referring especially to land titles, personal papers and miscellaneous items.

When this labor of classification was finished in 1968, the papers were delivered to the new Mission Santa Bárbara Archive-Library facility together with a complete set of microfilm. Since that time the originals have also been photocopied at Santa Barbara. The originals and microfilm copies are preserved in an air-conditioned vault. The photocopies are in the archive proper which is air-conditioned and under humidity control. Researchers use the photocopies because a significant number of the originals are very fragile.

The next task at Santa Barbara was also a formidable one. In the course of a year or so the archivist Fr. Maynard Geiger, O.F.M. examined the entire collection in order to familiarize himself with the contents. He then prepared a calendar of the entire collection to save researchers valuable time. This descriptive cataloguing resulted in 817 pages of typewritten material, double-spaced, which were contained in four large-sized loose-leaf binders. [NOTE: the calendar is on-line] The particular value of this calendar is that the contents of each document are spelled out so that any researcher in a single day or two can determine if a document is pertinent to his interest without serious loss of time. The detailed description of a document may range from one to twenty-five lines, the average being about five. Examples may suffice to give an idea of content descriptions:

from Mateo Uruchurtu of Hermosillo; on money and mercantile matters; on General Mejia's coming to Tampico with some Americans from New Orleans; on a new law taxing 1% on each finca; the beginning of a census; on taxes collected in Jalisco and Guadalajara; Santa Anna's presence in San Luis Potosí; continuance of war in Spain; over 900 religious houses suppressed by Queen Isabella, San Ildefonso, July 25, 1835; Domingo Danglada in Tepic; Fathers Tomás Esténaga, O.F.M. and Francisco Ibarra, O.F.M. ("Napoleon"), in Guaymas, Sonora; the death of Governor José Figueroa; on not having received a copy of the new Constitution of Mexico; the ships, Quintanilla and Centro America bought as coast guard vessels, Captain José Martínez, formerly in charge of the Asia, in command; sending De la Guerra the newspaper of Nov. 18, 1834, containing the list of religious houses suppressed in "our disgraced Spain." Mentioned are a Severiano, a Varela of Pitic, a Sánchez, Antonio Apalategui, Juan de Maitorena, Fathers José María de Zalvidea, O.F.M., Buenaventura Fortuny, O.F.M., Narciso Durán, an Antonio (Jimeno, O.F.M.?), Anastasio (Carrillo?), Padre Francisco Ibarra and others. 4 pp. <sup>16</sup>

The reading of the de la Guerra letters, diaries, accounts, petitions, statistics, and reports is like perusing the newspapers for a century and a quarter, covering North and South America, Europe, and at times Asia. Though an individual document here and there may have little historical value, the totality is extremely impressive on the life of the times. Some documents are official, others personal. They go through the gamut of all human interests and reflect throughout the activities, aspirations and accomplishments of the era.

According to Father Thompson's account, among the de la Guerra documents there are over 600 letters from fifty missionaries of both Upper and Lower California; over 200 letters from Spanish and Mexican governors of California; royal decrees from King Ferdinand VII, letters and decrees from the viceroys of Mexico; letters, decrees and passports from Mexican presidents; drafts, invoices, trials, cross-examinations; vast commercial correspondence; reports on contraband activity, shipping, logs of ships engaged in the hide and tallow trade; census and presidio reports; documents of appointment and promotion; confidential communications; Indian difficulties; records of travel. For the American period there are many records in Spanish and English, especially those of Pablo de la Guerra touching on the politics of the time. Added to these are many land case papers and personal items of the family.

Bancroft states that the de la Guerra Collection, "copies of which I was permitted to make at the kindness of Mr. Dibblee, executor of the estate, are the most extensive and valuable archive in California except those of Vallejo. <sup>17</sup> Miss Noya declared to this writer that the collection was the finest group of Californians documents she had ever handled in her long career at the Huntington.

To summarize, the researcher can find the de la Guerra Collection in the following depositories: the Santa Bárbara Mission Archive-Library has the original collection, as well as a complete microfilm and photocopy of the same; the Bancroft Library, Berkeley, has the transcripts made in 1877; the Huntington Library holds a photocopy and microfilm of the entire collection, as well as a copy of Fr. Maynard Geiger's calendar of the papers; the museum of the Santa Barbara Historical Society has a microfilm of the Bancroft transcripts and a partial microfilm of the original material, which was donated by Father Thompson, and the Academy of American Franciscan History,

Washington, D.C., has a microcopy of the original collection also supplied by Father Thompson.

<sup>8</sup> Dibblee was a native of New York, a lawyer by profession, who came to California in 1859, engaged in sheep raising in Los Angeles and Santa Barbara counties. He died at Santa Barbara in November, 1895. He was married to Francisca de la Guerra, a daughter of Pablo de la Guerra and Josefa Moreno. They had six daughters and two sons. In Santa Barbara he lived at Punta del Castillo (Fort Point) overlooking Santa Barbara. "He was very thorough in all he undertook. An excellent businessman, a thorough stockraiser, a thorough lawyer and an upright man in every transaction. He was what has been called a gentleman of the old school. Courty, liberal in his views, tolerant of the opinions of others, Mr. Dibblee was an ornament to the society of this place. He was a scholarly man, a deep reader and a profound thinker. His opinion as to any legal question was always eagerly sought and when given was accepted as fact." Santa Barbara Daily News, November 25, 1895. Copy in SBMAL.
